Title: Symposium on IPR Prerequisite in Higher Education

Date: 17th Feb. 2019

Speaker: Prof. Jeelani, Director for Distance Education, University of Hyderabad.

Target Group: Students of Degree and MBA

The goal of the seminar was to enhance attendees' understanding and awareness of intellectual property rights (IPR), while also highlighting its importance across a range of industries and promoting an innovative and creative culture.

Key Seminar Objectives were

- To raise awareness of the significance of intellectual property rights and their effects on innovation, economic expansion, and societal progress.
- To give participants a thorough grasp of all IPR varieties, including patents, copyrights, trademarks, and trade secrets.
- To spread knowledge about the methods and techniques used to manage and protect intellectual property.
- To promote conversations about the ethical, legal, and commercial consequences of IPR for academics, research, and industry.

The methods and processes involved in protecting and managing intellectual property rights were explained to the participants. They gained knowledge of licensing contracts, IPR infringement enforcement, and methods for commercializing intellectual property.

The following suggestions were put forward based on the seminar's discussions and major takeaways:

To promote a culture of acceptance of intellectual property, we should encourage educational institutions to include IPR awareness and education as part of their curriculum. Enhancing partnerships between the legal profession, business, and academia to promote technological transfer, commercialization, and intellectual property protection, promoting IPR support services, such as workshops, consultations, and patent clinics, to help researchers and innovators.
