Topic Name: Webinar on Understanding Securities market and Create Wealth

Event Type: Students of B. Com

Objective: The conference's goal was to arm participants with the in-depth knowledge and practical techniques needed to successfully negotiate the securities market and enjoy financial success.

Speaker Name: Prof.Neelakantam T

Event Date: 19th June 2021

An introduction to the securities market and a discussion of the various forms of securities, such as stocks, bonds, and derivatives, were presented at the beginning of the seminar. Participants developed a better grasp of the roles that investors, traders, and intermediaries play on securities exchanges.

With a focus on options and futures contracts, participants learned about derivatives. The conference discussed the fundamentals of options trading, such as calls and puts, and the idea of futures contracts linked to commodities, currencies, and indices. Participants obtained knowledge about the use of derivatives for hedging and speculating in risk management. Leverage and counterparty risk were two other potential complications and risks of derivatives that were brought up. Various wealth-generation techniques were covered in the lecture. It was addressed how to find undervalued businesses using long-term investing, which is based on value investing ideas. It was investigated to see if growth investment could be used for businesses with strong growth potential. The idea of income investment, with an emphasis on fixed-income securities and dividend stocks, was also put up as a way to build wealth. The idea of tactical asset allocation—adjusting portfolio allocation in response to market conditions—was emphasised as a flexible strategy for accumulating wealth.

Topic Name: Webinar on Online PedagogyTarget Group: Faculty and Students of Degree and MBAObjective: Overview of the online pedagogical methods employed, the challenges encountered, and the outcomes achieved during this period.Speaker Name: Prof. Neelakantam TEvent Date: 19th July 2020

A seminar on online pedagogy webinar was conducted on 19th July 2020 was attended by students and faculty of the college.

The speaker stated the facts of pandemic 2020 brought a complete change in the education sector, which gave opportunity to the educators to completely shift from classroom to digital room, and also to adopt other innovative teaching methods to engage students in the virtual model. The opportunity for live recordings of teaching, lectures and other interaction is another advantage of online education, but at the same time it also has a lot of challenges like lack of prior training leading to confusion in effective use of the technology, slower internet speed, etc.

The speaker emphasised that the in online teaching teacher must use technology to enhance the course content, the students must do most of the work as more time students spend engaged with the content, the more they will learn. Everyone should strive for presence of social, cognitive and teaching. And above all to get started all we need is to have the basic computer skills and internet knowledge.

The teaching competencies must be to develop communication skills particularly in written communication. As in many programs teachers and students are communicating primarily through emails, discussion board and other texts. Also, time management skills are critical for both faculty and students.

The session concluded with vote of thanks by a student online.
